Sullivan County Sportsmen Takes Legal Action to Address Renewal of Wetlands Permit for Wild Goose Project

By Phyllis A. Muzeroll e-Ticker News

CLAREMONT, NH--The Sullivan County Sportsmen, Inc., has taken legal action against the NH Dept. of Environmental Services in an attempt to force it to address the renewal of the wetlands permit for the Wild Goose project that the governor unilaterally pulled from the Executive Council's agenda for August, announced the group. The permit expires today, August 28th; Thursday night the Sullivan County Sportsmen voted to pay a lawyer to file a Writ of Mandamus in an attempt to force the renewal of the wetlands permit. It was filed on Friday in Sullivan County Superior Court.

"Since Gov. Chris Sununu pulled the renewal of the permit from the Executive Council's agenda for August, two lawyers have informed the SCS that they feel the statutes do not require executive action for the renewal of permits," a spokesperson for the group told the e-Ticker News on Saturday. "Fish and Game inquired of the state Attorney General's office if this was true. The Attorney General's office agreed but stated that since it is customary that permit renewals be submitted to the Governor and Executive Council for renewal, they are not willing to pursue this issue. Since it is the custom, it is considered as the rule.

"The law clearly states that all fresh water bodies larger than 10 acres are property of the state and the people should have access to these waters," continued the Sullivan County Sportsmen. "There currently is no boat launch for Lake Sunapee that meets the definition of a public launch giving the public access to the lake. Since the wetlands permit is necessary to progress with the development of the Wild Goose Landing at Lake Sunapee, it is legally necessary that the renewal be approved."

NHDES asked in a letter to the governor and Council dated July 13 that the request by the NH Department of Fish and Game for a five-year permit for the project be approved.

On July 28, Sununu announced that "Today, I pulled from the Governor and Executive Council meeting agenda another permit extension for the Wild Goose Site on Lake Sunapee in Newbury. We have heard the concerns of the residents of Newbury, Sunapee, and the surrounding towns. Enough is enough. This project has been debated for the last 20 years and it is time to put an end to this flawed plan. Public access to our state's waterways is important and essential, and we will work with the residents of the area to find a better solution to ensure greater public access."

In a letter dated August 17, the NH Fish and Game Commission responded to Sununu on the Sunapee Access, writing, "Dear Governor Sununu & the Honorable Council,

"At the August 9, 2017, Commission Meeting, The Fish and Game Commission voted unanimously to write to you to express our serious disagreement with your decision to pull the wetlands permit extension for the construction of the Wild Goose public access site on Lake Sunapee.

"This boat access proposal has been in the works for over 20 years, however, not due to the lack of effort by the Fish and Game Department. We feel the delay is due to a few wealthy individuals who have ownership on the shores of Sunapee and want to keep our 6th largest lake as their own private domain.

"Lake Sunapee's waters are 'Waters of the State,' and by statute since 1906 must allow access to the public. Countless hours and over $400,000 of the public's money has been spent on studies, engineering and permitting to date. To throw this away because of the selfish feelings of a few individuals should be a crime, as New Hampshire Statute states, 'No individual or corporation shall prohibit public access to public waters.'

"Exhaustive studies have been conducted, public hearings have been held and attended by hundreds of residents, and signed petitions have been submitted by thousands, all in support of the Wild Goose site. It not only is the best site, it is the ONLY site that will meet the criteria as supported by the environmental assessment.

"We, the Commission and our constituency, not only strongly urge you to re-consider your decision to pull the extension of our wetlands permit, we also ask for your support in building this important access site, which will be used by thousands of residents and tourists alike to enjoy one of the great gems of our State."

It was signed, "Theodore Tichy, Chairman, NH Fish & Game Commission".

According to a Valley News article on July 29, the Lake Sunapee Protective Association said it was "pleased" with the governor's announcement, adding that the group was not "opposed to increasing boat access on the lake but fought this plan by New Hampshire Fish and Game." According to the article, the LSPA believes "a better solution would be to improve parking and access at the state beach, which is about 1.5 miles north of the state-owned Wild Goose property."

Sullivan County Sportsmen, which has supported the Wild Goose project since the beginning, agrees with the NH Fish and Game's contention that the project has been stymied by "wealthier" individuals who own property around the lake, saying in a statement to the e-Ticker News that if the legal action works, "All the regular people win, and if it doesn't work, the much smaller group of big money people wins and it sets a horrible precedent for the moneyed to prevent the regular people of this state from being able to exercise their rights, in this case access to the lake." It disagrees with the LSPA that the state beach would be a better site, expressing concerns that it could "cause accidents to occur" in that area. Concern was also expressed. said the attorney for the group, that locating the boat access there would interfere with people who go there to "enjoy the beach."

According to information provided by the Sullivan County Sportsman group, a Mandamus ("We command") is a judicial remedy in the form of an order from a superior court, to any government subordinate court, corporation, or public authority, to do (or forbear from doing) some specific act which that body is obliged under law to do (or refrain from doing), and which is in the nature of public duty, and in certain cases one of a statutory duty. It cannot be issued to compel an authority to do something against statutory provision.

Shaheen, Hassan, Kuster, Shea-Porter, Bipartisan Group of New England Members Urge USDA to Provide Relief to Dairy Farmers

WASHINGTON, DC-- As dairy farmers across New England continue to struggle with historically low milk prices, Senator Jeanne Shaheen, Senator Maggie Hassan, Congresswoman Annie Kuster, and Congresswoman Carol Shea-Porter joined a bipartisan, bicameral group of members of Congress on Wednesday in urging the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) to use its authority to provide dairy farmers with the relief and new insurance they desperately need. In a letter to Secretary of Agriculture Sonny Perdue, the members of Congress emphasized that safety net programs for dairy farmers, such as the Margin Protection Program (MPP), have failed to provide farmers with adequate support. Led in the House by Kuster, the letter urged the Agriculture Department to make milk an eligible commodity under the Federal Crop Insurance Program – which successfully insures farmers across the country for hundreds of different kinds of crops – and to work with USDA's Risk Management Agency (RMA) to develop new insurance products for dairy producers.

Farm milk prices have dropped almost 40% in the last few years.

Senators Shaheen, Hassan Announce Professional Development Grants to Support Granite Staters Who Experience Disabilities

WASHINGTON, DC – Wednesday, Senators Jeanne Shaheen (D-NH) and Maggie Hassan (D-NH) announced that the New Hampshire Department of Education has been awarded a grant from the U.S. Department of Education to improve early interventions and education for students who experience disabilities. The New Hampshire Department of Education will receive $770,000.00, and the grant is anticipated to be for a total of five years. This grant program is authorized under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) to assist states in providing professional development to improve results for students who experience disabilities.

"I'm pleased to see these important investments in New Hampshire, which will help strengthen our commitment to essential education priorities," said Shaheen. She continued, "This funding will assist Granite State families in a significant way by devoting fundamental resources to support school programs tailored for students with disabilities. I will continue to work to ensure New Hampshire schools and communities have the tools they need to provide our kids with the best education and opportunities available."

Claremont Fire Dept. Called to Attic Fire

CLAREMONT, NH--On the night of August 20th, at 11:56 p.m., the Claremont Fire Department was dispatched to 97 Red Water Brook Rd., for a reported attic fire. The duty shift responded to the incident with three engines, as the property is located beyond the municipal hydrant system. Upon arrival, the duty officer found a story and a half woodframed dwelling, with a smoldering fire in the roof of the rear ell of the home. The crew stretched a 1 3/4" attack line to the rear of the building and also assessed conditions in the attic. The home owner advised the duty officer that he had entered the attic before the fire department's arrival and hit the fire with a portable extinguisher. Fire crews laddered the rear addition of the building and had to peel back some metal roofing to extinguish all hot spots. At the same time, additional firefighters made their way through the small attic space and applied foam to charred rafters and the underside of the roof deck. The fire was reported under control at 0039 hours and firefighters remained on the scene for another half hour checking for extension and overhauling. All apparatus were back in quarters at 1:23

"The cause of this fire has been placed on a motorized attic vent fan that was installed in the roof deck," said Claremont Fire Chief Rick Bergeron. "It appears that the thermostatic switch somehow failed and arced, causing the ignition of adjacent combustibles. This fire was discovered by the homeowner when he noticed unusual lighting conditions outside his home. Upon checking further, he found that the entire fan assembly was ablaze on the outside of the roof of the rear ell."

Damage caused by this fire was moderate and extended to the finished roofing, roof deck, rafters, insulation, as well as to the living room ceiling and associated wiring. The home is owned by Ronald Flood; he told fire official that his home was protected by insurance. There were no reports of injuries at this fire, said Bergeron.

Developing Skills to Address Maternal Depression

CLAREMONT, NH--TLC Family Resource Center is now accepting enrollment for a pilot research study that was announced earlier this year. The study is sponsored by Dartmouth's Synergy Community Engagement Pilot Program. Dr. Fallon Cluxton-Keller, assistant professor of psychiatry at Dartmouth's Geisel School of Medicine, and Dr. Craig Donnelly from the Department of Pediatrics and the Department of Psychiatry, will be managing the pilot study.

The study will a video-based, skill-building method for peripartum depression in home visited adolescent mothers. Peripartum is the last month of pregnancy and the first months after delivery. Peripartum women under the age of 21 are invited to take part in this free program that also provides financial incentives as part of the pilot. Each woman who participates will receive $140 for completing 10 thirty-minute sessions.

"It is hard for families to access support for depression in a rural area," said Executive Director Maggie Monroe-Cassel. "This videobased program means that the support and skill-building knowledge can be delivered via computer or cell phone right in the home. The study is fully compliant with all confidentially laws. This study will set the stage for developing more family-based support for peripartum depression." The home visiting staff of TLC Family Resource Center, including parent educators, a registered nurse, and a licensed clinical mental health counselor will work with the staff of Geisel and the mothers, using the video format.

The TLC Family Resource Center has served families in Sullivan and Lower Grafton Counties for 25 years. Developing new and appropriate ways to support families wishing to provide the best opportunities for their children is key to the mission of the organization.

Pregnant women or newly delivered moms who are first time moms and under the age of 21 are encouraged to call TLC Family Resource Center and speak about the program to the clinical supervisor, Melony Williams, at 603-542-1848 x 303.

Week in Review

My week began with an event at the library to celebrate the solar eclipse and ended with a visit by Executive Councilor Kenney to our municipal airport. It was one of those weeks that reminded me of how many people are invested in making Claremont a great community. While there is not enough room in this article to touch upon everything that happened over the last five days, here are the highlights.

The front lawn of the Fiske Free library was the site of much activity on August 21st when people of all ages came together to watch the solar eclipse. Thanks to the initiative of the library staff, grant money was obtained to provide music, storytelling and solar eclipse glasses for those who attended. Friends of the Fiske Free Library provided beverages and homemade baked goods, further enhancing the festivity of the occasion. There was so much public interest, that even though 500 solar eclipse glasses were distributed, there wasn't enough for everyone. Perhaps the success of this turnout will be the catalyst for greater plans in 2024 when we will be in the direct path of the next solar eclipse.

On August 22nd Congresswoman Kuster visited Claremont to discuss her efforts at the federal level to end sexual violence. As the leader of a bipartisan task force on this issue, she wanted to hear from various stakeholders who work directly with those affected by sexual violence. The following day, August 23rd, Senator Shaheen also visited Claremont for a roundtable discussion on improving the Affordable Healthcare Act utilizing a bipartisan approach. Personnel from the medical, business and nonprofit communities, along with local officials, relayed the importance of Valley Regional Hospital in the community and the need for accessible health care for all residents. It was encouraging to see how many people are coming together, both locally and federally, to create outcomes that will improve people's lives.

On Thursday, August 24th, Claremont hosted a public information session on housing loan/repair programs for single family homeowners of limited income. Representatives of the USDA Rural Development Office, Habitat for Humanity and Southwestern Community Services were present to provide an overview of their programs and answer questions. Also in attendance was Department of Public Works Assistant Director St. Pierre who provided an update on the City's progress of getting lead out of the water distribution system. The event was well attended by homeowners interested in accessing these programs to improve and remove health/safety hazards from their homes.

Friday, August 25th, Executive Councilor Joe Kenney visited our municipal airport as part of his tour of airports in his district. It was an opportunity for him to see the latest improvements and hear of future plans to better leverage the airport as an economic development tool for our region. It appears from the discussion that establishing a café at the airport will be a future objective.

Solar Eclipse Fever Hits Fiske Free Library

CLAREMONT, NH--The Fiske Free library in Claremont was insanely busy on Monday, August 21st, as eclipse fever took over. "From the time we opened at 9:00 a.m., people flooded in looking for eclipse glasses which they heard we were handing out," said Children's Librarian Marta Smith. "At that point we were worried about having enough for the people coming to our eclipse program at 1:00

100 pairs for the program and handed out the rest until they ran out at about 11:00 a.m. After that we told people to show up for the program and we would have more glasses to hand out. We had a great program featuring Odds Bodkin presenting "Tales of the Eclipse"; he is a wonderful storyteller and many people who remembered seeing him here when they were children brought their own youngsters to see him. We began to panic a bit when we saw the number of people lining up outside for the program and to see the eclipse."

p.m., so we kept

Smith said it "was amazing how good natured everyone was about the glasses shortage, however. We started handing them out and limiting it to one pair per family and still we ran out, everyone was willing to share so it all turned out fine."

Smith said that they had approximately 300 people attending the program and viewing. "Many children came from two of the local summer camps and many families were there as well. All in all, it was a very successful day, a perfect finale to a very successful Summer Reading Program!"

While it may have been only a partial eclipse in New Hampshire, clearly the program at the Fiske was a "total" success as science, fun and community combined for a memorable day.

Kuster Hosts Roundtable Discussion in Claremont on Preventing Sexual Violence

CLAREMONT, NH--Tuesday, Congresswoman Annie Kuster (NH-02), the founder and co-chair of the Bipartisan Task Force to End Sexual Violence, joined healthcare providers, survivors, law enforcement and others in Claremont to discuss efforts to prevent sexual violence. The discussion focused on local efforts, services, and challenges surrounding sexual violence in New Hampshire's rural communities.

"Sexual violence is not only a moral issue to me; it's a personal issue," said Kuster. "This is a pervasive problem in our society, and I want to thank the incredible advocates who joined me today to share their ideas, experiences and perspectives. I will share what I heard today with my colleagues on the Task Force as we continue to discuss, hold hearings, and draft legislation on this issue to end sexual violence in our rural communities."

"We are grateful for the Congresswoman's leadership and support on this issue and hope what was shared in this listening session will prove helpful as she continues to serve as a champion for survivors in Washington," said Deb Mozden, Executive Director of Turning Points Network. "There are unique challenges that we face working in a rural community, but thanks to the collaborative efforts of those represented at today's panel, and many more throughout our greater community, we are often able to work together to provide survivors with the support and services they need."

Kuster was joined at Tuesday's discussion by Amanda Mace, Direct Services Coordinator at Turning Points Network; Dr. Cindy Gallagher, Superintendent of the SAU 43 School District; Liza Draper, Rural Outright & SHINE Program Coordinator at the TLC Family Resource Center; Denis O'Sullivan, Lieutenant & Investigator at Sullivan County Sheriff's Office; Willow Moryan, Nurse Practitioner at Planned Parenthood; Janet Carroll, Clinical Coordinator of Adolescent/Adult SANE Program and Emergency Department Staff Nurse at Dartmouth Hitchcock Medical Center; Cathy Brittis, Program Manager at Child Advocacy Center of Grafton and Sullivan Counties; Erin E. Residents to Vote on Allowing Keno in City

CLAREMONT, NH--Claremont residents will be voting on whether Keno will be allowed to be offered in the City when they go to the polls this November. The City Council voted Wednesday night to move the issue to the ballot following a presentation by Maura McCann, director of marketing for the New Hampshire lottery. If the measure passes, the lottery commission will reach out to the businesses in the City, 21 of them, which serve alcohol (referred to as "pouring establishments") to sell the new lottery game, which the lottery is calling Keno 603. Keno 603 is a rapid draw numbers game; 20 winning numbers are drawn by a Random Number Generator (RNG), every 5 minutes from 11:00 a.m. to 11:00 p.m., said McCann.

This is a NH only game, unlike any other draw game offered by the NH Lottery, she added. The minimum play is $1. Players select up to 12 spots (numbers) from a field of 80 on a play slip, or use Easy Pick to have the Lottery terminal select the numbers. Twenty winning numbers are randomly chosen for each drawing; winning numbers are displayed on the monitor.

Players win based on how many of the winning numbers they match to the ones randomly chosen.

After a lengthy debate in both the House and the Senate this past legislative session, the full legislature passed a bill that funds full-day kindergarten by legalizing Keno. Under the measure, schools would receive the additional funding starting in 2019.

McCann said benefits for establishments that offer Keno include Increased foot traffic, Increased sales and check averages from additional winnings spent on food, beverages, and tips for staff; they earn selling and cashing commission and earn selling bonuses. Establishments that sell Keno in other states report an increase in food and beverage sales from customers staying longer to play Keno, said McCann. Establishments earn an 8% commission on every dollar sold for the KENO 603 game; estimated revenue projections from the lottery are $43,750,000 in total sales, with a Net Revenue to the Education Trust Fund of $8,472,500. DoE will calculate and distribute grants of $1,100 per pupil (enrolled in approved program) to each school district. Communities would still receive the funding even if they vote down the ballot measure for their town.

Councilor Nick Koloski, who owns a restaurant in Claremont, stepped down from the council while the issue was being discussed and took a seat in the audience. He did not vote on the resolution to place the matter on the ballot.

A public hearing on the Keno measure will be held in October at the CSB Community Center.

Also at Wednesday's meeting, departing Asst. Mayor Vic Bergeron was presented with a plaque of appreciation and a fun gift basket of Florida-related items, such as sunscreen lotion and flip flops (see photo at the left). He and his wife, Linda, are moving to the Sunshine State; his last meeting as a councilor was Wednesday. Councilor Carolyn Towle also announced that she will not be seeking re-election in November for several reasons, including health matters.

Are You a "Hardworking" Investor?

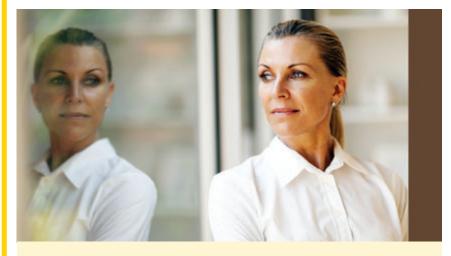

Next week, we observe Labor Day, a celebration of the American worker. You work hard your whole life with the hope that your efforts will ultimately allow you to achieve your financial goals, such as a comfortable retirement. But for that to happen, you may need to apply some of the lessons of the workplace to your efforts as an investor.

So, what are these lessons? Here are a few to consider:

- Be consistent. The most successful workers are the ones who show up, day after day, and strive to overcome the inevitable obstacles that crop up. As an investor, you, too, need to be consistent in your habits - which means you should keep investing in all types of markets. If you take a "time out" every time the market drops, you might end up missing opportunities when the next rally begins.
- Be flexible. When good workers see that something is not going well, they change what they're doing. And when you invest, you also may need to make adjustments. If an investment has consistently underperformed, or if you have too many others very similar to it, or if it just doesn't meet your needs anymore, you may be better off by selling it and using the proceeds to invest elsewhere. This doesn't mean you should constantly be buying and selling — in fact, you'll likely be better off by purchasing quality investments and holding them for the long term. But you need to be flexible enough to make the appropriate moves at the appropriate times.
- Be informed. The best workers are those who regularly update their skills and acquire knowledge that helps them do their jobs better. As an investor, you should also keep learning – about the investment world in general and about new opportunities for you to explore. And you should always understand what you are investing in – and why. Even if you work with a financial professional, you need to inform yourself about every aspect of your investment portfolio - after all, it's your money and your future.
- Be farsighted. Good workers not only know what they're doing - they also can visualize the desired outcome of each task. And, of course, people who are in charge of a particular endeavor, or who are responsible for the fortunes of a business, have a clear view of what they want to accomplish, even if the achievement of that goal is many years in the future. When you invest, you also need to see where you want to go. If you can constantly keep in mind your long-term goals - such as the type of retirement lifestyle you desire you will likely find it easier to stick with an investment strategy that's appropriate for your needs and risk tolerance. Conversely, if you lose sight of your destination, you might be more prone to taking short-term detours, which could work against you.

Labor Day reminds us to appreciate the skills and dedication of all workers – and as an investor, you can put these same attributes to good use.

It's About Food

By Johnny Navillus

Nantucket Cod

I'm passing along this story for several reasons. First, this is an outstanding seafood stuffing. Second, it shows that anyone with just modest cooking skills can create something remarkable. Third, it shows that measurements aren't all that important in cooking. Fourth, I need to fill this space.

We had house guests for about a week. My wife's sister and her husband. Rabid Steelers fans. So my wife decides that I'm going to make his favorite restaurant meal. He orders this whenever they go out. Nantucket Cod. Never heard of it. Besides, this is a guy with season tickets to the Steelers. He gets special treatment? To keep the peace I agree.

My wife doesn't know what's in it or where he gets it. She walks away. Thanks. So I went to Google and finally found the restaurant. No recipe as such but a description and list of ingredients on the menu. To work.

Johnny's Seafood Stuffing

Crabmeat

Shrimp

Spinach Onions

Cheddar Cheese

Cracker crumbs

Dill (my addition which makes it Johnny's)

I chopped up some Imitation Crabmeat. I forgot I had a can of real crabmeat on the shelf. Chopped up some cooked shrimp I had in the freezer. Chopped up some onion. Spinach and crumbled up some Ritz crackers. Chopped up some dill I had from last week.

I added it all together a little at a time so that I could control where I was going with this. Once I got it together, I melted some butter to bind it up.

Now when you get a piece of cod, there is a round piece at the top; I butterflied and stuffed that. Had a lot of stuffing left so I took the rest of the fish and made roll-ups, stuck in a tooth-pick, put it all in a baking dish at 400° and baked it about 10 minutes.

He and his wife got the stuffed parts and my wife and I had the roll-ups. Mr. Steelers thought it was just like the restaurant but a much larger serving. And something was a bit different but had a better taste. (Dill) Scored big points.

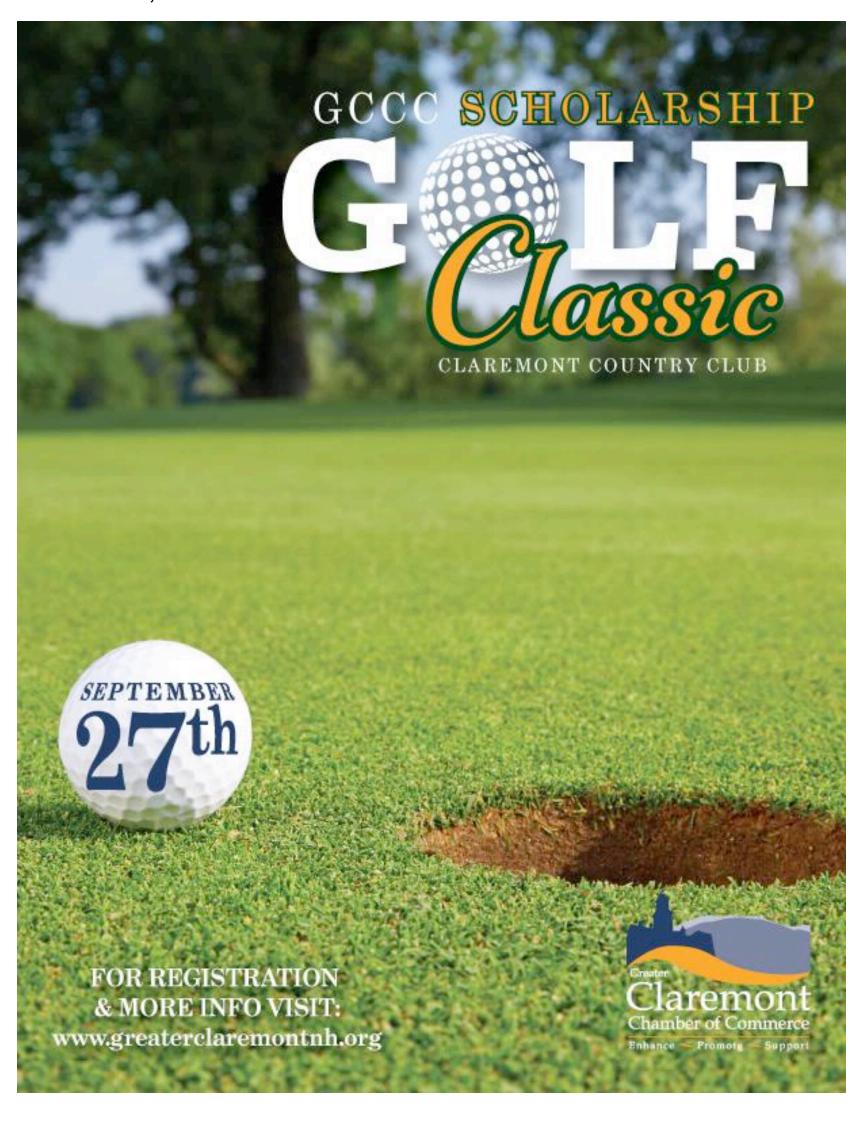

My wife liked it so much she wants me to make it more often. I will because it is easy (don't tell) and very tasty.

Remember, change one thing and it becomes your own.

Something to bear in mind: I was making a fruit salad based on instant vanilla pudding. I usually don't read the fine print unless it is a new to me product. This time I noticed that there is a "Note" in small print at the bottom of the label. It says that the pudding will not set if soy milk is used. Good to know if you use soy milk. I checked some other pudding boxes I had on the shelf and it seems that this is a new thing they are advising. The older boxes did not have the note.

Play with your food. Restaurants do it all the time.

Sobriety Checkpoint Announced

WALPOLE, CHESTERFIELD, NH--As a result of the increasing incidents of drinking and/or drugged driving, the New Hampshire State Police petitioned for, and was granted, Superior Court authorization to conduct a Sobriety Checkpoint. The "Sobriety Checkpoint" is an effective method of deterring, detecting and apprehending the impaired operator.

The program, approved by the NH Highway Safety Agency and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, provides federal highway safety funds to support these checkpoints, which will be conducted in Walpole and Chesterfield.

A review of records has shown that the use of alcohol by individuals who operate motor vehicles has resulted in an alarming number of deaths and personal injury accidents. Therefore, in an effort to maintain safe roads in Cheshire County, the New Hampshire State Police, in conjunction with the Walpole and Chesterfield Police Departments, will be conducting Sobriety Checkpoints in the Walpole and Chesterfield areas over the course of the next few weekends.

The purpose of the Sobriety Checkpoint is to deter, detect and apprehend the impaired driver, said law enforcement in a press release.

On Wednesday, Aug. 23, Senator Jeanne Shaheen visited Valley Regional Hospital for a roundtable discussion on possible changes to improve the Affordable Care Act. Local officials along with members of the business, medical and non-profit communities discussed how the ACA is affecting them and talked with Shaheen about potential changes to the program. She told the group that she has introduced some legislation--the Marketplace Certainty Act, which would permanently appropriate cost-sharing reduction payments and expand healthcare eligibility to more Americans who need help affording their premiums--now in committee, to bring about some changes to the ACA, but said it will take work by both parties to come together to bring affordable and accessible healthcare to all who need it.
